Chapter 1 by That Grammar Geek

They called her the Schwa.

She used to hate when they called her that, but she adjusted. She was as average as you could get, just like the "uh" sound of a schwa, the most common sound in the English language. Like the "a" in forgettable.

She wandered around campus on that muggy winter day in Florida, and began to weep for no reason whatsoever, like she often did.

Nolan walked by at that minute, and whispered to Gabriel. She heard the words "Schwa" and "dirty" and another she couldn't bear to think of.

But any attention was good attention to her, because she was treated like she was invisible by almost everyone.
